covery was made in the Dingman well," said a prominent oil operator last night. "Following a conversation which I had with Mr. J. D. Pugh today, I am convinced that we are on the verge of a development which will startle the entire country."

"Mr. Pugh stated that for several days the drill in the Southern Alberta well had been working in the oil shales, and he expressed the opinion that crude oil would be a reality in that well within a very short time."

"He further declared that the information had not been given to the public because the Southern Alberta company had nothing in the way of stock to sell, the project having been financed by private individuals, and that the first news of petroleum indications had been wired to the larger Chicago stockholders."

"He said that there was no object in withholding the news from the local public, but that neither he nor Mr. Livingston were interested in giving impetus to the excitement which has prevailed since the first discovery."

Field Will Be Proved.

"Mr. Pugh naturally is very enthusiastic because of the splendid indications in the Southern Alberta," said the interviewed operator, "and knowing the situation as I do I feel confident that the time is close at hand when crude oil will be struck in this property and little doubt will remain that the men who took the initiative in the development of the oil fields in this province knew to a fair degree of certainty what they were doing."

"I believe that within the next sixty days, when much greater depth will have been attained in several of the properties, the field will be proved to such an extent that great capital, which is slow to become interested, will pour into the district from London and eastern money centres."

L. D. Ward, secretary of the Amalgamated Oil Company, Limited, made his first visit to the oil fields of southern Alberta yesterday. He returned tonight highly enthused over the situation as he viewed it in the active field of work. Mr. Ward's visit was primarily for the purpose of looking over that portion of the field controlled by his company, and he was particularly pleased with the site which had been chosen for the first well to be sunk by the Amalgamated on southeast quarter of section 12, township 20, range 4, west of the fifth meridian, a short distance west of the Dingman and United Oils wells, and on the west slope of the second anticline.

A Sufficient Discovery.

Mr. Ward visited the Dingman well, and last night he stated that he realized as never before great importance of the work which is being done by the Calgary Petroleum Products Company in the sinking of two wells, and in the installation of a plant for the condensing of the well gas.

"If they never strike a gallon of crude petroleum," said Mr. Ward, "this company is developing an industry which will be of untold value to the province of Alberta. I was informed that the 'wet gas' which is now coming from the Dingman No. 1 and No. 2 at the rate of 3,000,000 cubic feet a day, is giving more than five gallons of commercially pure gasoline from every 1000 cubic feet, and it does not need a lightning calculator to figure out the magnificent income from this product alone."

"From the location of the Herron-Elder well, less than a quarter of a mile from the Dingman No. 2, there is hardly a question that this well will develop equally as great a revenue producer. I cannot see failure for any of the companies which are now bending their energies toward thorough development of their properties, and it is my firm opinion that an era of prosperity is at hand which will be shared by every person who has contributed to the development now under way."

Oil Shales Pierced.

"At the United Oils well I found the work of drilling being pushed with all possible speed, and when Mr. Deven-

The dark war cloud which threw a shadow over the Hindu prison hulk Komagata Maru yesterday has melted away. The amber-colored prisoners of the Komagata have metamorphosed from warriors to peaceful captives again and the Hindu situation, which had an ugly look yesterday is again characterized by more or less tranquillity. The featured five who have occupied so much space on the front pages of the papers since Saturday are again aboard the Komagata. The far-famed five who were marooned by their fellow argonauts on Friday and have since been living an aquatic life on board government gas boats in the harbor, were once more allowed aboard the fragrant Komagata last night. Yesterday was a busy and hectic day for the immigration officers. Early in the afternoon the gas cruiser Winamac carried Supt. Reid and J. Edward Bird, counsel for the Hindus, out to the Komagata. Mr. Reid personally delivered an ultimatum to the rebellious Hindus. At 8 o'clock, he said, the folorn five would be brought to the ship's side. If the side ladder, which has been tried up since Friday, was not down and if the fatuous five were not taken on board the ship, he would bring a force of police from the shore and they would board the ship, and the turbaned denizens of India's coral strand would be chastened with clubs or something worse. This was the ultimatum. It was a choice between peace and war.

Then Mr. J. Edward Bird, the counsel for the wanderers, addressed them from the top of the Winamaca's house work, and advised them to choose the paths of peace and let the storm blow over. Mr. Bird's pacific remarks were translated to the mass of unwashed humanity crowding the rail of the steamer by several linguists. The lawyer also broke the sad news to them that the court of appeal had given judgment against them. This was received with expressions of dismay.

At a little after 8 o'clock last night a squad of police were in readiness to go on board the steamer and give the Hindus some schooling if it were necessary. But it wasn't. The Winamac went out to the Komagata with Superintendent Reid, Inspector Hopkinson, Inspector Howard and several immigration officers, and Alderman Woodside. The police were waiting for a hurry call to the waterfront. There seemed to be an abundant chance for trouble and the waterfront was alive with people who desired to witness what they could from the wharves. The winamac was navigated alongside the smaller launch in which were the fugitive five. In a few minutes this small picket boat went alongside the Komagata. The mediation of Mr. Bird and the intercession of the peace party on board the steamer and the firmness of Mr. Reid, had been successful. The Komagata was flying a flag of truce. The white flag was the side-ladder, which was lowered away in its usual position at the ship's side. Those who had beheld from the wharves this sign of peace knew that the trouble was over. The launch drew up alongside the ladder and after some parley between Mr. Reid and Gurdit Singh and a few other Singhs, the faltering five went up the ladder and were restored to their happy, though fragrant marine home. So the police were not needed. There was some small show of hesitation on the part of the Hindus at the last minute, and Mr. Reid had to again threaten to summon the police. He was in no mood for trifling and pulled out his watch.

"Now, I'll give you two minutes more in which to make up your minds," he shouted, "at the end of two minutes I'll send for the police."

Bhai Gurdit and the others threw up their hands to signify surrender. "Send the five up," yelled Gurdit. And the fatigued five marched up the ladder.
