SASI is pleased to announce that the work of SACDA has been featured on the Association of Canadian Archivists (ACA) website.

The Association of Canadian Archivists (ACA), founded in 1975, is a non-profit organization that represents the needs and interests of archives and records professionals throughout Canada. They provide members with opportunities to network with archives and records professionals across the country, develop professional skills and expertise, and participate in national and international advocacy initiatives.

The dedication and hard work of our Digital Asset Archivist, Thamilini Jothilingam, and the SACDA team, have been recognized on the ACA Blog, In the Field. In the Field is a place for discussion about the wide range of issues encountered and raised in these spaces related to archives, archival education, and archival interventions.
